SURVEY BEGUN FOR THE KANSAS CITY-DENISON LINE

Denison, Texas, Nov. 9.—A party of railroad surveyors supposed to be working for the Missouri River and Gulf Railway, the new Harriman line that is to be built from Kansas City to Denison have commenced work here and will locate a line north into Indian territory. The first objective point will be Coalgate.

There is thought to be but little doubt that the surveying corps is in the employ of the Missouri River and Gulf.

The same company has several corps in the field in Missouri and Kansas. The Missouri River and Gulf was chartered in August. The purpose is to build a line from Kansas City to Denison, from Lehigh, I. T. to Shreveport and a branch line to Joplin, Mo.

The Kansas City-Denison line will give the Harriman interests a straight connecting line between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific. The Missouri River and Gulf will connect here with the Houston and Texas Central, which is a part of the Southern Pacific system.

There has been considerable talk that Harriman, in furthering his Kansas City Denison line, would absorb the Missouri Oklahoma and Gulf, which has a line constructed from Wagoner, to Dustin, I. T. It would undoubtedly be a good line for the Harriman interests and may be taken in by Harriman when the proper time comes.

TO ENTERTAIN TAFT.

Secretary of War Will Be Royally Received at Lawton.

Lawton, Ok., Nov. 8.—Not in the history of the post at Fort Sill has there been accorded an officer of the war department a larger reception than will be given Secretary W. H. Taft on his visit to the Fort, that is expected to be Nov. 12. Upon his arrival a salute of seventeen guns will be fired, after which a parade and grand review will be held on the parade grounds northwest of the post in the presence of the secretary and the commanding officers at the post.

The Chamber of Commerce has in contemplation an elaborate reception in case it is found that the secretary can accept the invitation. In this entertainment Major Charles W. Taylor, commanding Fort Sill and his staff, will be participants.

In way of recreation a wolf hunt is being prepared for Secretary Taft and his party during their stay in this community. It cannot be definitely stated of how many days' duration the chase will be until it is learned how much time the War Secretary can remain away from duty.

It will be a strictly army affair, as was the case in the Presidential hunt in the spring of 1905, with likely a few civilians to help in the leading of the pack of wolf-catching dogs.

DEMOCRATS WON DISTRICT NO. 3 BUT LOST NO. 111

Oklahoma City, Nov. 9.—Additional returns received from district 111, in the extreme southeastern portion of Indian Territory indicates that the republican candidate was elected by a small majority.

In this district the gerrymandering board placed all the polling places south of the river in the strong negro settlements, and forced the white and democratic voters to drive thirty miles or more than a day's drive in that section and around mountains and hills to get to the voting place.

The democratic nominee in district No. 3, E. R. Williams won, by a safe majority. These are the only changes in the result from the tabulations in the Oklahoma, but the number of democrats in the convention will remain the same.

If the two contests which will be brought before the convention, are decided in favor of the democrats the majority party will have a representation of an even hundred delegates.

Chairman Jessie J. Dunn left yesterday morning for his home in Alva, and Secretary Charles D. Carter also returned to his home in Ardmore.

W. D. Cardwell, chairman of the speaker's bureau, who moved to Oklahoma City last summer, will continue to make his home here.

Guthrie, Nov. 8.—The home districts of the main republican leaders all went against them in this election. Governor Frantz's home district at Enid went nearly two hundred democratic; the home district of Bird S. McGuire went 250 democratic; the home district of ex-Governor Ferguson went about 50 democratic and that of Chairman Hamon went over 200 democratic.

The election board of the two territories will meet tomorrow at Guthrie and Muskogee for the purpose of canvassing the returns. It is believed that all will be in by that time.

The suggestion made by Judge James H. Maxey, of Shawnee, that the constitutional convention may adjourn to Shawnee after organizing in Guthrie is not taken seriously at all by the leaders of either party here.

Thus far the names of five democrats have been mentioned in regard to the presidency of the convention including W. C. Hughes, of Oklahoma City; Henry S. Johnson, of Perry; W.

A. Ledbetter of Ardmore, Peter Hanratty of McAlester and J. H. Maxey of Shawnee.

EXPRESSION FROM FURMAN.

Causes Assigned for the Great Democratic Victory.

When asked by the News reporter for an expression regarding the election results, Judge Henry M. Furman said: "The great democratic victory is due to a combination of causes. The people are tired and sick at heart of carthaginism. We have had too many public lords and not enough public servants. The favoritism shown by those in authority, among us, for railroads and other corporations, who have not been living up to their charter duties and obligations has disgusted the people and cost the republican party the confidence and support of many intelligent, honest and patriotic republicans. The race question also cost the republicans thousands of votes. The people demand the adoption of the initiative and referendum and the right of recall. With the exception of a few districts the republicans were opposed to these demands and the people knew it. A careful investigation will show that fully 40 per cent of the democrats elected received practically the solid labor vote. Then the republicans were out-classed in the management of the campaign. Our canvass was far more ably conducted.

"Now that we have succeeded in carrying the Constitutional Convention, we must make good our campaign promises. The people have given us their confidence. We must prove ourselves worthy of it. If we do this the state will become as solidly democratic as Texas is. This is the golden opportunity for democracy. In our exultation we must not lose our heads or forget those to whom the victory is due. Because we were treated unfairly by the infamous manner in which our convention districts were laid out and the polling places were established is no reason why we should retaliate and be unfair to any one. Let us set an example of fairness and justice to all and the people will continue to honor us with their confidence and support."

NEW STATE BAPTISTS IN SESSION AT SHAWNEE

Shawnee, Okla., Nov. 9.—The Oklahoma State Baptist General assembly opened yesterday morning at the First Baptist church. The register shows about 1,600 ministers, lay delegates and members of the Oklahoma Missionary society present. The guests have largely been cared for in the hospitable homes although the hotels have housed many of them.

The Indian Territory and Oklahoma Home Missionary societies have amalgamated under the name "Oklahoma State Missionary Society." The ladies are holding their sessions at the Presbyterian and First Methodist Episcopal churches.

The general assembly was called to order at 10 o'clock and the service opened with a devotional exercise led by George Smith, of Oklahoma City.

Dr. H. A. Porter, of Oklahoma City, one of the ablest speakers in the assembly, delivered an excellent sermon on the text, John 6:66, following which a short Sunday school talk was indulged in.

The board of managers made its report showing an excellent state of affairs in the church of Oklahoma, and the reports of the corresponding secretary and of Dr. J. A. Scott, of Oklahoma City, the state missionary, also were read amid much pleasure.

The night service was conducted by Rev. J. W. McAtee, and the sermon was delivered by Rev. W. H. Dodson, of Guthrie. Some miscellaneous business was discussed, preparatory to the union of the Oklahoma and Indian Territory assemblies, which will probably take place today.

NEGROES FURIOUS OVER ACTION OF ROOSEVELT

Washington, Nov. 9.—One who has lived here during the Roosevelt Administration and become accustomed to the wild admiration for the President manifested by District of Columbia negroes on all possible occasions, can scarcely believe his ears as he hears such bitter denunciations of Theodore Roosevelt from the lips of his dusky friends. The order of the President disbanding the battalion of the Twenty-Fifth Infantry, the regiment which furnished the negroes who shot up the town of Brownsville, Texas, some months ago, is the cause of the trouble. The negroes are expressing their indignation, especially at that feature of the order which dishonorably discharges the men.

Some of the best known negroes of Washington, headed by W. Calvin Chase, an attorney, are preparing a call for a National conference of negroes to be held in this city for the purpose of considering the action of the President and taking such steps as may be necessary to have the order modified. It is said to be the opinion of the local committee that Senator Foraker of Ohio should be requested to take up the matter in the Senate. The power of the President to discharge men from the service is not questioned, but his authority to "dishonorably" discharge them is doubted.

The work of making out the discharges of the members of the battalion is progressing at the War Department. The hardship upon non-commissioned officers, some of whom have served twenty-five or thirty years, on the frontier, in Cuba, China and the Philippines, is great. These men were looking forward to their retirement pay, and now they are put out of the army with nothing in the world, and will be unable to earn a livelihood, for it will be hard for them to find employment, having been dishonorably discharged. There is said to be reason to think the President will modify the order in the cases of some of this class, who are not charged with having had any connection with the Brownsville outrages, and could hardly have known the names of the guilty soldiers.

Hearst Alone Defeated

New York, Nov. 8.—With the official vote of but three counties missing tonight, Louis Stuyvesant Chanler apparently is elected lieutenant governor on the democratic independent league ticket by a plurality of 1,700 votes over M. Linn Bruce (rep.)

It appears late tonight that all the other democrats on the democratic state ticket except governor are elected by a small plurality.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is sold by G. M. Ramsey.

It is a well known medical fact that pine resin is most effective in the treatment of diseases of the bladder and kidneys. Sufferers from back ache and other troubles due to faulty action of the kidneys find relief in the use of Pin-ules. $1 buys 30 days' treatment. For sale by G. M. Ramsey.

WHY KIDNEY DISEASE IS DANGEROUS.

Neglect of the First Warning Symptoms is the Prime Cause of so Many Deaths from the Dreaded Bright's Disease.

It is Easily Curable in the Early Stages.

Kidney diseases are so destructive to human life because they do not manifest alarming symptoms until the constitution is seriously weakened and the strength exhausted. Then, too often, the remedies employed by many physicians are of indifferent or doubtful value, and the patient rapidly sinks under the disease. The wisest course is to apply a reliable kidney and liver remedy on the first appearance of the symptoms. A little uneasiness in the small of the back, digestive troubles, bowel irregularities and disorder in the urinary organs are matters of small moment in the estimation of strong men and women, yet they have a serious meaning. They show clearly that the kidneys are suffering and need help, which must be forthcoming at once to prevent serious, perhaps fatal consequences. A few doses of Prickly Ash Bitters at this time would prove of incalculable value in restoring the weakened organs to health. An investment of one dollar in a bottle of Prickly Ash Bitters when the disease is yet in the early stage will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills, besides the suffering that would surely follow should the disease be allowed to fasten itself in the body. The excellent curative power of Prickly Ash Bitters is not confined to the first stages of kidney disease. It is equally efficacious in severe or chronic cases. Physicians have used it as a last resort, in cases that defied their best efforts, with the most brilliant results, and it has shown its superiority over the many so-called kidney cures, now being loudly advertised, in instances innumerable.

Accept no substitute. Insist on having the genuine Prickly Ash Bitters with the large figure 3 in red on the front label.

Sold at Drug Stores, $1.00 per bottle.

Letter to W. D. Lowden, Ada, I. T.

Dear Sir:—We manage to get some fun out of paint. J. H. Kohlmeier, Grove City, Pa., put in Devoe. Along came a salesman of somebody else's paint before ours had got there. Salesman said ours was short measure. Kohlmeier weakened, hung fire and flopped ours and took his.

It was our turn now. We emptied our can into his and his into ours. The short measure was his not ours; and we kept our man.

And, ever since then, that paint-facturer gives full measure; his paint is not pure but his gallon contain four quarts.

Go by the name; and the name to go by is Devoe lead-and-zinc.

Yours truly,

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the controller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusiness-like habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving prospects, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

The Bald Eagle, King of American Birds

Holds Peculiar Interest Because It Stands as the National Emblem of United States.

Wherever eagles occur commonly they are among the best known of birds. They appear frequently in the language and legends of ancient peoples, and often have been chosen as national emblems, since for size, powerful flight and fierce nature they have been celebrated from earliest historic times. Though found in almost every quarter of the globe—North America, South America, Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and the East India islands—they are most numerous in Europe, Asia and Africa. North America possesses but four species, only two of which—the golden eagle and the bald eagle—are of general distribution and thus of particular economic interest in this region.

The bald eagle, otherwise variously called white-headed eagle, white-headed sea eagle, and bird of Washington, is of particular interest to Americans as the national emblem of the United States, to which dignity it was elevated on June 20, 1782. The name 'bald' eagle, by which the species is almost universally known, originated from the white head and the erroneous impression of baldness it gives at a distance.

This bird measures about three or three and one-half feet in length, from six to eight feet in extent of wings, and weighs from six to 12 pounds.

mals, it sometimes kills fawns. This, however, is much more than offset by sometimes even develops no little attachment for its owner.

Since the bald eagle feeds largely on fish of various kinds, it of course destroys species useful to man, and to this degree must be considered injurious; but the total amount of this harm would seem to be comparatively small for much of its finny prey consists of species not economically important. On the other hand the devouring of vast quantities of dead fish, that if left to decay would pollute the air, is a positive benefit. Its destruction of ducks, geese and other water fowl, all of which are available as food for man, is perhaps its most serious because most frequent fault; but this is to a considerable extent local, and confined largely to the winter and the seasons of migration. It attacks gulls and other non-game water birds so seldom that even were their economic value much greater than it is there would be little against the eagle on this score. Upland game birds are not often molested, and song birds are evidently considered too small to be worth pursuit.

Although not attacking large ani-

The Shaded Portion Shows the Breeding Range of the Bald Eagle.

When fully adult its color is dark brown, with white head, neck and tail, yellow bill, eyes and feet. At least three or four years are required for the assumption of this plumage, younger birds being entirely brownish or blackish.

The bald eagle inhabits nearly the whole of North America, from northern Mexico and Florida north to Ungava and the Anderson river, west to the mainland of Alaska, the Aleutian islands and the Commander islands, Kamchatka.

Under most circumstances wary and difficult of approach, with an eye open for danger and giving suspected things a wide berth, this eagle, nevertheless, where not molested, is often surprisingly tame and unsuspicious. Unprovoked it rarely attacks man, although such instances have been reported. It prefers tree for watching and roosting, but in spring sometimes descends to ride the cakes of ice in the river, apparently looking for fish. Though not a gregarious species, it may at times be seen in companies of as many as ten or 15 individuals. It is evidently not lacking in conjugal affection, and the first mating results in an alliance, defensive and offensive, that is believed to last as long as both survive; but when one of a pair dies the other, male or female, soon secures another partner that at once assumes the responsibilities of the interrupted household. The notes of the eagle are few, usually produced in a loud, harsh scream.

The flight is powerful, capable of being indefinitely sustained and is accomplished now by steady wing beats, now by soaring either on a level course or in great ascending circles, as is the habit of most large birds of prey. The bird occasionally makes a plunge from a great height, a marvelous feat performed with such velocity that the eye can scarcely follow the descent. In strength, the bald eagle is hardly less remarkable than in power of flight, and it has been known to carry a lamb five miles fully equal to its own weight. It can readily be kept in confinement, for it will thrive on any kind of meat or fish, and it its destruction of such more or less noxious mammals as opossums, raccoons, ground squirrels, prairie dogs, rabbits, rats and mice.

The complaints lodged against this eagle for the destruction of poultry and the smaller domestic animals, such as pigs and sheep, seem to come largely from the southeastern United States; in localities where the bird is rather numerous, where other food is at times scarce, and where the domesticated animals are easy of access; but the total amount of this damage is, comparatively speaking, not great. The bald eagle is, moreover, almost everywhere somewhat of a scavenger, a trait that should be set down to its credit.

All things considered, the bald eagle is rather more beneficial than otherwise, since much of its food is of little or no direct economic value, while the good it does more than compensates for its obnoxious deeds; and furthermore it seems not likely ever to become abundant enough in any locality to be seriously destructive.

ON FASHION'S HIGHWAY

By FRANCES RIVERS

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Toward five o'clock, on a supremely hot July day, Mr. Godfrey Boyne strolled leisurely along the gravel path of the promenade.

He loitered, seemingly at random, making his way slowly between groups of animated people, stopping for no reason, and remained idly agaze over the heads of the crowd on fashion's highway.

At any rate, he thought, applying this recollection as healing unction to the scratches imprinted on his vanity by the acid of such general forgetfulness, Audrey has remembered; and he, smiling, recalled the facility with which intimacy with Lady Annandale had been resumed; the friendly informality with which she had reentered into relations with him; the bewildering immensity of her social influence; the celebrity which, at first as the wife, then as the widow, of a viscount, notorious in career and memory for his many vices, she had acquired.

He had taken himself to Fashion's highway, the purpose of joining Lady Annandale being less distinct in his thoughts than the wish to see her. So immersed was he in reflection that he failed to notice that a victoria had stopped opposite to him. Suddenly a footman addressed him:

"I beg your pardon, sir," said he, "but her ladyship sent me to say that she wishes to speak to you."

Godfrey turned; Lady Annandale was stepping from the carriage.

"You can go home," said she to the footman.

"Very good, my lady."

Then she gave to Godfrey her hand. "This place—" she glanced round at the radiant prospect—"seems scarcely the spot suited to serious discussion. We might, perhaps, over there."

So, side by side, Lady Annandale and Mr. Godfrey Boyne walked across the soft, green turf and established themselves upon chairs under the sweet-scented lime trees, whose sheltering boughs masked them from observation.

He beamed amiably round.

"I have brought you here, that you may continue your last night's interrupted account of the woman with whom you were in love," said she.

"Was in love? It's absurd to use the past tense. I am in love with her. Love is not a state from which you can recover as from an epidemic. I am, of course, speaking of the real thing."

"I see; something other than flirtation." "Flirtation is but the froth of love."

Lady Annandale laughed. "Passion! does your real thing include that?" "Passion is love's dregs, besides being Cupid's pseudonym for the work he is ashamed to acknowledge."

"I had no idea I was speaking to an expert; but how, may I ask, did you come to study the subject so profoundly?"

"In Ceylon, beyond love's influence, I devoted some attention to the science."

She raised her eyebrows.

"Is that all you learned?"

"That, and to make money."

"To make money?"

"Certainly. I'm a wealthy tea-planter of Ceylon."

"A wealthy tea-planter, did you say? But to return to your love," she suggested.

"You can't return to a thing you've never parted from, can you?"

"Then you know more of the subject?"

"A great deal more."

"How much?"

"Here it is. I see a boy and girl, the joyful intimacy of their childhood deepening into the poetry of youth—"

"And, of course, the girl knows that the boy loves her?"

"Naturally; since not an hour of the day passes but he tells her so."

"Tells her? Surely not."

"By every means in his power, except his tongue. He doesn't put it into words, because he knows that to do so would be hopeless if she doesn't understand without that."

"Don't you think she might make a mistake if he says nothing?"

"But she must know that he dreams his dream of the future, in which, having made a nest and lined it softly with down, he will come to her and say: 'It awaits you.' Then he hopes that, with the gracious spirit manifest in all her bearing, the girl, with love and tenderness shining from her eyes, would, putting her hand in his, say: 'I am ready.'"

"Your vision is charming, idyllic; but how about the girl and her dreary days of waiting, for I suppose the boy to have gone off into the world?"

"He had to go into it to fill his man's part."

"Before going he should have told her in words of his love."

"You really think that his doing so would have made any difference—when all that he was then in a position to ask was faithfulness?"

Lady Annandale sighed.

"This particular girl was probably brought up to marry, as, had she been a boy, she would have been brought up to some profession. In your vision, what became of her?"

"She fulfilled what I see you consider to have been her destiny."

"Marriage?"

"Yes; she married a peer."

"And was happy ever after, according to the formula?"

"I suppose so. Isn't every woman happy who achieves rank and is an acknowledged beauty?"

"And the boy?"

"Woke from rosy dreams in the sunlight to find that in the time of his slumbering the sky had become overcast."

"And blamed the girl for a fault that was his own?"

"No; he didn't blame her, but for a time he was heartbroken."

"Did he lose sight of her altogether?"

"Not altogether; for when, in the fullness of time, she was again free, he came back to her."

"And he found her the same?"

"This woman's beauty is a fact of an astonishing order, and she is ten times more lovely even than she was."

"Her nature. Has that deteriorated?" Lady Annandale spoke earnestly; her face was grave and sad.

"To test that is very simple."

"Really?"

"I have but to say to her: 'Marry me, and let us together renew the simplicity of our youth.' The next—you remember that I spoke of a nest?"

She bowed her head.

"Is fairly lined. Will you with it accept my heart and name?"

Lady Annandale's arms of aggression, even of defense, were possibly close at hand, but she made no attempt to reach them, and was not maladroit in thus leaving them untouched; for this harmlessness of attitude on her part induced Godfrey to lay aside his buckler of suspicion, and in reply to her "Then this visit of yours is, I take it, a tribute—a small tribute to youthful sentiment, to a dead love?" he, as lightly rejoined:

"By no means. Love, amongst the other attributes which I have enumerated, resembles a sachet, with the scent of which we are so familiar that it is advisable sometimes to shake it up anew."

"I Couldn't Go," She Interrupted.

Then, seriously, he added: "Oh, my dearest, we have lost ten years!"

"You would wish to take me to Ceylon?"

He saw the pupils of her eyes contract at the unattractiveness of the suggestion.

"Of course, if—"

If Godfrey had come to her with the intention she believed, or even if this intention had been caused by the spell of proximity, he must be no longer mistaken in her meaning. "I couldn't go," she interrupted.

"Then we will leave Ceylon to take care of itself," he said, carelessly, taking no more notice of her words than if she had not said them.

"You seriously mean that?"

"I was never more serious in my life. I will abandon that nest and make another over here."

"Then we come to the second count—your heart. Are you quite, quite sure that it is negotiable flesh, not in a battered condition?"

"I swear—"

"You needn't; for, oddly enough, I believe you."

"You are the only woman I have ever cared for."

"Does not every man tell every woman that?" She looked into his eyes and laughed.

Then, across this chasm Lady Annandale lightly threw a plank, accomplishing with a woman's dexterity, more in one moment than Godfrey had been able to do in weeks of arduous work.

Vaguely, in a tremor of unformulated hope, Godfrey saw that that which had appeared to him as the end might really be but the beginning.

"In all the phrases, creeds, commonplaces which you have said of love, you have omitted to enumerate the only attributes that woman recognizes," said she, and paused to beg him, by a little Sphinx-like smile, to pay attention to her words.

"These are its power of over-riding every obstacle; of conferring upon woman a title higher than that of queen."

"Go on, please, go on," he stammered.

She looked straight into his eyes. "You are dense and stupid if you cannot understand how dear to some women may be the name of 'wife.'"

For a country house or a corner lot in a village this house plan is very appropriate. It often happens that the parlor and the spare bedroom are very little used, but the family is not satisfied without suitable provision for a visitor, and they appreciate a good, comfortable parlor when occasion requires, but it is not necessary to have these rooms heated at all times during the winter. This plan provides for a cozy compact house of six rooms with two store rooms without counting the parlor and spare bedroom. In this way it is easy to economize on fuel and still have all the comforts of a warm, well arranged house. For a summer house the plan is complete. There is plenty of room and a great opportunity for ventilation.

The specifications call for a screen over the opening to the cold air duct which furnishes the air to the furnace, but the owner is supposed to see that screens are made for every window and every door. Good wire screens have received a great deal of attention in the United States of late. Twenty-five years ago it was common to see cotton mosquito bar latched up to the windows, then wire netting commenced to be manufactured, but the quality was so poor that it soon rusted. Improvements in manufacturing, however, have produced a wire screen that is thoroughly satisfactory, even in salt water air.

The advantages and comforts of a house screened from insect pests are being recognized by physicians in England as well as here, and they are working to educate the people to the fact that the common house fly is a are and roost there, waiting for an opportunity. When they get in the house they are in a trap and don't know how to get out, and they wouldn't go out if they did. Too often openings are left at the sides or corners of screens that are large enough to let the flies crawl through, then garbage and other loud smelling material is left about to draw flies. Some housekeepers know how to whip them out easily and quickly, but others apparently never think of doing so.

Another thing, not every housekeeper knows that flies won't stay in the dark. Darken every room in the house except one, and the flies will all be found in the light room. It is not pleasant to occupy a house with insects that you know have just come dangerous carrier of disease germs and the mosquito is a distributor of malaria. With proper screens and dark shades it is comparatively easy to keep the house almost entirely free of both flies and mosquitoes.

The sight of a kitchen filled with flies is neither comfortable nor appetizing. Flies feeding on meats in course of preparation is disreputable. Not every housekeeper knows how to from some manure heap or other filthy place. The beasts are hatched in filth and spend their time wallowing in it except when they are paying us a visit.

This house is 28 feet wide and 42 feet long, and the porches are extra. It should be built for about $2,000. The pantry and china closet are taken off the back porch, in order to leave the dining-room and kitchen square. This leaves the pantry big enough to walk through, so there are two doors to prevent odors from cooking penetrating the dining-room. The stairway in this house takes very little room, and it is a very cheap way to build a stair. The shape of the roof over the kitchen makes a good place for two store rooms, without going up to the attic. Store rooms are appreciated by every housekeeper. There are always things to put away in the spring that are not wanted until winter, and there are other things to put away in the fall that are not wanted until spring. It is unusual to find a house with accommodations for this kind of stuff. Some of it is not worth very much, but it is too good to throw away, and some of it is too valuable to put in the attic or cellar, and this arrangement provides a splendid place for it.

A woman can take a great deal of interest in fixing up a house like this, because she has something to work in. It is big enough, it is light and airy, and it looks well from the outside. If it is placed in a pleasant neighborhood, the view through the cellar from the kitchen is the most convenient arrangement yet devised. The 12 by 15 cellar extension in the front makes the very best cold storage for fruit and vegetables, a feature that is thoroughly appreciated by fore-handed housewives who understand how to buy in quantities for half the money and how to have a supply on hand for weeks and months ahead. Such management saves not only money, but time and labor, because there is less running to get the necessary supplies at the last minute.

keep flies out of a house even when she has good screens. The habit of holding the screen door open for several seconds when passing through is large windows is very pleasing and agreeable. The plan provides for a splendid cellar, and the way down to quite common with some folks, and this gives an opportunity for flies to lodge in. Flies know where the doors
